Discover a portal the afterlife, where our souls have been transferred from our physical bodies. This is the end of the world as we know it. It could be the end of the universe as we know it as well. And this is where your journey begins. Our souls are in danger. Someone or something wants us to get out. We need to get out. Explore a mysterious world completely different from our physical bodies and use your special ability to travel through portals to get out of the world. But the portals don't end here. Stroll, glide, jump, and dash to explore a vast open world and unravel the story of the afterlife.

Q: How to get the "id" from another controller and reuse it I have a screen where I add a button, and when this button is pressed I need to get the id that I added in the controller #add in the other controller and use it.

controllers/add.js $scope.additionToast = function(n) { $scope.task = n; }
controllers/main.js $scope.additionToast = function(n) { $http.post(url, n).success(function(data){ $scope.main = data; $scope.addToast = false; $scope.additionToast(data); }); }
I want something like $scope.additionToast = function(n) { $scope.main = n.id in the other controller, is it possible?
A: It depends on what you mean by "additionToast", but you can just do this: $http.post(url, n).success(function(data){ $scope.main = data; $scope.addToast = false; $scope.additionToast(data); });
And in the other controller: $scope.additionToast = function(n){ $scope.main = n; }
Edit: but your main problem is that you can't have both $scope.additionToast and $scope.main, because $scope.additionToast will overwrite $

Released: The Legend of Zelda: Hyrule Warriors has a soundtrack called "Hacktag Remixes" to be released on November 9, four years after it was debuted at E3 last year in an official trailer. Konami Digital Entertainment moved to remove all the official music and video of the game earlier this year, although various game-related songs got leaks later and gained a lot of positive comments from fans. Download Link: "Hacktag Remixes: The Legend of Zelda: Hyrule Warriors" Update: The soundtrack, along with a 24-bit version of Chibi-Meta Knight, is now available for download at Nintendo eShop on the US and EU Nintendo eShop. Original: Several days ago, I mentioned how today is the same as November 9th after releasing a short post. Today, the eighth Wii U Zelda game, The Legend of Zelda: Hyrule Warriors, is releasing. The game was announced at E3 2014 which was the culmination of Nintendo's presentation at the event. Fortunately for us, I was able to get my hands on Nintendo's sound test at E3 2014 before the Wii U's launch and also the packaging. While it was sad to say farewell and good bye to Nintendo, the reaction to the sound test and packaging was overwhelming. There were so many fans this year, and the reactions to the products were wonderful. Nintendo pulled out all the stops for the Zelda title this year, and the result is a Wii U exclusive that will sell over a million copies in the first year since launch. That number will easily be exceeded in the second year and third year and beyond. Hyrule Warriors is going to do great. It's going to sell a million copies in the first year; it'll eventually bump up past one million in the second year, and then the third year. It will be a record breaking phenomenon. Anyway, I got a chance to return back to E3 2014, review the packaging and then delve a little into its sound test. Hyrule Warriors takes place in the same universe as the handheld console's Legend of Zelda title. It's too hard for me to cover everything with having only a day to go, so I'll do the best I could and cover everything I did in and around E3 2014, and also have a soundtrack that was released for the game to listen to. That's it in a nutshell; nothing surprises me anymore, and I love that. Don't forget to come back tomorrow

The Bassmaster® brand has been synonymous with freshwater and saltwater bass fishing since 1975. Created by Curt Bass, Bassmaster® is the sport's leading angling publication and television show, bringing the action to a wide audience. Bassmaster® National Casting School (CBS Sport) is the only school to help bass fishers learn bass fishing. With interactive course materials and on-line video, the Bassmaster® National Casting School helps amateur and professional bass anglers improve their casting and reel, how to catch bass, improve their presentation, retrieve them and much more. Bassmaster® has also been involved in the most popular outdoor events and shows on television, including the Bassmaster Classic® Series, the Bassmaster Elite Series and AnglerX that focus on catching Largemouth Bass and all other popular saltwater species. Bassmaster® National Casting School is managed by the company Foundation for Conservation, Environmental Education & Recreation (F.C.E.R.). F.C.E.R. is a 501(c)(3) nonprofit, all-volunteer organization that educates, empowers and connects people through the sport of fishing and its conservation for the benefit of future generations and all species. Founded in 1982, the Foundation for Conservation, Environmental Education & Recreation (F.C.E.R.) was created to advance conservation and community fishing in the United States. F.C.E.R. promotes conservation by helping people to live the outdoors responsibly. F.C.E.R. has built an extensive network of programs, which are focused on helping people in the outdoors, and actively seeking to conserve fish and wildlife, and the habitats that support them. F.C.E.R. runs the Bassmaster National Casting School (CBS), which gives millions of fishing and nature enthusiasts around the world the knowledge and training they need to fish safely and responsibly. F.C.E.R. also runs the Nature Watching Project, a non-profit program that seeks to bring greater understanding about the outdoors to people who want to grow their connection to the outdoors through nature watching. You can get the latest Bassmaster® National Casting School news and updates on Facebook, Twitter and Instagram @BassmasterNcast.
